EASTERN NEWS.

[illegible] TO THE OREGONIAN.]

[illegible] Ratification Meeting.

[illegible] July 11.—A Democratic meeting of [illegible] held here yesterday and will proceed to Albany to officially apprize Tilden of his [illegible]. A feeling prevailed among some of [illegible] of the committee, that the etiquette [illegible] Tilden's [illegible] not strictly correct [illegible] that way, was nominated as a citizen of [illegible] and not as Governor of the Empire State [illegible] to meet him at his private residence in [illegible].

[illegible] appointed by the Democratic [illegible] to notify the nominees, have [illegible] a sub committee to inform Gov. Hendricks [illegible] nomination for Vice President. The [illegible] has decided on an address, in which [illegible] will be officially informed of his nomination [illegible].

[illegible] of the meeting to-day there was an [illegible] whether the committee [illegible] upon Gov. Tilden in Albany or await [illegible] of Mr. Tilden at his home in this city. [illegible] was telegraphed that the commission and his presence was desirable, [illegible] that he would meet the committee in New York this evening.

[illegible] His Gratitude.

[illegible] last night Dom Pedro said: "Al[illegible] [illegible]'s voice is always silent I [illegible] to utter my thoughts to the American [illegible] Society for the honor it confers [illegible] presence of men so prominent in [illegible] and such indefatigable ex[illegible] [illegible] who man, rivaling, as it were, [illegible] labor is the greatest glory and a [illegible] happiness, on so solemn an oc[illegible] it is my duty to express how, in [illegible] the principal geographical studies which [illegible] elements of wealth and will so[illegible] as a Brazilian, but without partiality [illegible] brilliant and useful to all nations [illegible] has always endeavored to main[illegible]. [illegible]'s address was received with enthusiasm [illegible] some time before Judge Daly could [illegible] Hays.

[illegible] of Custer's Fight.

[illegible] has the following additional details [illegible]: They took the flying savages in [illegible] on Reno. Reno crossed [illegible] and charged down the valley about [illegible] half, for [illegible] what seemed to be the [illegible]. Certainly they were on a dead run, [illegible] turned and charged the advancing [illegible] his command and engaged [illegible]. The fire was terrific and reminded [illegible] of the engagements of the Wilderness [illegible] never heard firing more terrible. In a [illegible] command was completely surrounded [illegible] devils on every side, firing at short [illegible]. Charley Reynolds, a well known scout, [illegible] killed, exclaimed: "We are gone up [illegible] no hope for us." Reno was evidently of [illegible] opinion. He ordered his men to mount [illegible] the way, they cut forward. Porter's [illegible] attracted by a dying man belonging [illegible] company, who was shot through the [illegible] cavalry was flying, pursued on every [illegible] Porter sprang to his [illegible] his arms around the horse's [illegible] the animal forward, passing [illegible] by Indians in their chase for [illegible] reached the ford with little loss. [illegible] on a horse which had been [illegible] taken and pulled from his horse [illegible] pistol shots while lying at the [illegible]. In this state of confusion, [illegible] reached the ford, a narrow pass [illegible] and horses were crammed and [illegible] Indians firing into them at short [illegible] front, flank and rear. [illegible] the river. Lieut. Hodgson was wounded [illegible] killed; he received another shot just [illegible] the bank, and tumbled back into the [illegible].

[illegible] being [illegible], a wild scramble com[illegible] the bluff beyond [illegible] of the bluff, was so steep that the men [illegible] to cling to the necks of their animals, [illegible] from their backs. Col. Smith [illegible] the incline to be the steepest he ever saw [illegible] by horses or mules. Though the Indians [illegible] on every hand and firing into the re[illegible] force at short range, they gained the summit [illegible] just as they reached it, eight men shot on [illegible] up, fell from their horses. Lieut. Matthews [illegible] set about building barracks for a hospital—[illegible] and dead men were used for this purpose [illegible] as well as stores from pack mules. Those who [illegible] the retreat were placed under Porter's charge [illegible] number rapidly increased. DeWolf was [illegible] just as he reached the summit, and Porter [illegible] alone with no help, until Girard escaped [illegible] thicket; when, with his assistance two am[illegible] were performed. [illegible] inform your correspondent that when [illegible] in sight of the 1800 lodge village of [illegible] 7,000 inhabitants, he swung his hat and [illegible] Custer's struck the biggest Indian [illegible] the American continent!" Halting here [illegible], he pushed forward at a rapid gait [illegible] companies for his personal command, [illegible] three, and left four in reserve under [illegible]. Mr. Porter believes the result would have [illegible] had Custer charged with his full [illegible] the massacre would have been more [illegible], instead of simply failing to accomplish [illegible] result, so misconducted his forces as [illegible] seriously and permanently mar all [illegible] future success of the expedition. He [illegible] deliberately, and without a shadow of [illegible] to obey his written orders issued [illegible] Terry's personal directions, but [illegible] positive disobedience of the strict [illegible] the department commander. Instead [illegible] his line of march to the valley and [illegible] laid down in his written orders, he [illegible] to the mouth of Little Powder [illegible] to Tongue river and instead of [illegible] stream down to its mouth there [illegible] the main command, he, for some un[illegible] and unexplained reason, switched off [illegible] course and marched across the [illegible] stream. He had been particu[illegible] not to approach as Custer had pre[illegible] in the neighborhood. The effort to [illegible] in the terrible [illegible] known. A court martial of Reno [illegible]

Postmaster General Jewell's Resignation.

Washington, July 11.—A few days ago Postmaster General Jewell being asked about the report that he intended to resign, laughingly replied that he was so far from resigning that he expected to remain in his place until the end of the present administration. Yesterday afternoon, however, after calling at the executive mansion to transact some business with the President, the latter, much to the surprise of the Postmaster General, informed him his resignation would be accepted. Mr. Jewell immediately wrote a letter accordingly. The most intimate friends of Mr. Jewell are unable to account for this action of the President except on the grounds of political considerations. Mr. Marshall, first assistant post master general, who is in the country, was telegraphed last night or else immediately, and arrived this morning, when Jewell much to his astonishment, informed him what had taken place. Marshall is now acting postmaster general.

Jewell's Successor.

Washington, July 11.—The President to-morrow will nominate Judge J. N. Tyner of Indiana, now assistant postmaster general, to be postmaster general in place of Jewell.

Straw Bids—Gen. Jewell's Testimony.

Gen Jewell was before the House committee on postoffices and post roads to day, and testified relative to the development of straw bid frauds, and the efforts made to suppress them, also as to clerks charged with complicity in the frauds. Being asked if any member of the Cabinet has asked him, or talked with him in relation to the resignation of certain clerks asked to resign, he replied if any one of the Cabinet had asked him a question about the removal of certain clerks he should refuse to tell the committee and did refuse to tell why he removed certain clerks, giving the general reasons that were only satisfactory to himself why they should be removed.

Near the end of Jewell's examination by the postoffice committee to day, he was asked—Was your resignation forced, or voluntary? Answer—Well the President notified me that my resignation would be accepted and I tendered it.

Question—Were any charges preferred against you? Answer—No, sir, not that I am aware of. The President has not given any reason for the removal, but its known object was political. The President had favored Senator Conkling's nomination for the Presidency in preference to Morton. He was not considered complimentary to the latter and is showing his friendship for him. The change is reported to strengthen the Republican party in Indiana and Ohio, while nothing is to be gained in Connecticut by the retention of Jewell. Senator Morton had a long interview with the President yesterday and to day. After the adjournment of the cabinet meeting, Tyner was closeted with the President.

The Blaine Investigation.

The judiciary committee met to day to continue the investigation into the matter of the Fort Smith and Little Rock bonds, but postponed it, so far as Blaine's connection with it is concerned on the receipt of two dispatches from Blaine's physician stating that perfect quiet is desirable and perhaps necessary to insure his recovery.

A Glut in the Silver Market.

Virginia City, July 11.—Speculators have been sending trade dollars in large quantities from San Francisco to Virginia, where heretofore they have been taken at par. The result is, the market here is glutted and the merchants of the city will hold a meeting shortly at which it will doubtless be decided to take trade dollars hereafter at ninety cents only.

IMPEACHMENT TRIAL.

Belknap Investigation.

Washington, July 10.—Upon cross examination the witness said he testified before the committee because he did not believe the secretary of war would pay any attention to his communication.

Carpenter asked the witness if he wrote the letter to the secretary in September 187[illegible], marked "confidential." The witness answered in the affirmative.

Question—Are you willing to have the confidence removed and allow the letter to be read? A.—I am willing the letter should be read.

The letter was handed to witness who read as follows:

(Confidential.)
Fort Buford, W. T.

My Dear General Belknap: I wish to express what I think a duty to myself. It is unnecessary to discuss the fact that I have felt that you have felt unfriendly towards me for a long time. For three years before you became secretary of war, I with others did what we could to do away with what we then thought and still think to be unwise and pernicious to the army; that is, our system of sutlering now called post trading, with a view to substitute the plan employed in nearly all respectable armies of supplying articles necessary to officers and men at cost by one of the branches of the army. I believe this was accomplished and a law passed requiring the commissary department to perform that duty. Finally the law was passed giving us the present system which is by far more objectionable than the original plan. I have always believed this law for post traders was put through Congress under false representations, as its purpose, specified in the text, makes it for the benefit of the traveling public, while it gave us back the old sutler, in which the traveling public is not interested the ninth part that the soldier is. Seeing that we were defeated, and the army encumbered again with the old system, which is nothing less than a system of leeches applied to the pockets of the army—although personally the present sutlers are not objectionable men—and that the objections of the commissary department virtually blocked any action in the matter, and would defeat any attempts through the army itself looking toward correcting the evil, I endeavored to call the attention of Congress to the subject through my old friend and school mate, General Garfield. I naturally gave the worst instances of the workings of the law I knew of, and there were instances of farming out the business at heavy rates, which were, of course, a tax to that amount upon the garrison. In this there was nothing whatever intended to be personal to the Secretary of War but merely examples of what I believed to be an odious law. I had reason for being inimical to the Secretary, and I state but the exact truth in saying that only the highest regard and kindest feeling towards him always actuated me, with a single exception, referred to further on. My letters to Garfield were to have been confidential, so far as concerned their authorship. My motive was only to refer it to the action of the law which I believed necessary to the army. I desired expressly not to appear in antagonism to the Secretary of War, as it would be easy to put such construction on my action. My letters fell into the hands of one Smalley, secretary of the House military committee, who was also the New York Tribune's correspondent. He not only published the purport of my letters, adding as much as he saw fit while enlarging on other points, so as to make a different matter of it as published, but, although not mentioning my name, so discredits his authority as to at once put it upon me. Soon after, when Coburn was chairman of the committee, I was summoned to Washington to give evidence upon the staff organization of French and German armies. After furnishing information on these subjects I was questioned upon the subject of post traders. At first I remonstrated on the ground that I had not reported to you, because I believed the commissariat department could defeat any action in that direction and that my testimony might be considered a discourtesy to the Secretary of War. Coburn said what I might say would be confidential with the committee. I then gave the facts as I had before done to Gen Garfield. My testimony was, however, openly published. About this time feeling that after a long and successful fight in which we had gained substantial good, we were about being defeated by a simple fact that seemed the paltry selfishness of the branch of the army whose duty it was to carry out a law which did not benefit them; but merely added slightly to their duties, I received much censure for my action in this matter, and in my great irritation did write an intemperate letter to either Garfield, or Coburn, in which I used many of the expressions found in Smalley's statement. I was in a manner put on trial and the letter, so to speak, extorted from me, and I have always regretted it. Whether it came to your notice or not I ask pardon for everything in the whole matter. I have been guided conscientiously by a desire to do what I think a good to the army. The law referred to in my letter was a mandatory one of plain construction,—one in which the troops on the frontier are interested to the extent of about $2,000,000 annually, and the construction referred to in that letter is not understood either in fact or in justice. It has been opposed from the first by the department whose duty it was to carry it out. The subsequent order respecting officers coming to Washington, etc., led me to believe you thought I had busied myself in matters of general legislation upon army matters, and the officers of the staff had said I was the author of the Coburn bill which they had seen in my hand writing. So entirely untrue is all this, that feeling certain that many would charge me with this on account of my book, I was especially cautious and never conversed that winter with any member of Congress at any time upon any matters of a general nature. I have before me a letter from Gen. Coburn stating that I never saw the bill or any of its provisions until after it was introduced in Congress. If you think I ever wronged you, it was certainly not my heart. I unfortunately have one or two enemies of high rank in the army who I sometimes think, wrongfully wronged me in the eyes of those above me. If I have said anything which you would care to have further explained, I shall be but too glad to give the opportunity. I am, most respectfully

W. B. HAZEN.

To the Hon. Secretary of War, W. W. Belknap, Washington.

The witness further testified that he never knew the secretary of War to do anything inimical or unfriendly to him. Some further testimony was offered to substantiate this, to which the managers objected. Gen Hazen was allowed to retire, and Carpenter moved that the Senate sitting as a court of impeachment adjourn over until Wednesday to allow the defense to prepare their case, and thought, with such preparations, he would be able to save time to the senate in submitting the defense. Without deciding the request the Senate resumed legislative business. Adjourned.

Washington, July 11.—The consideration of the articles of impeachment against Belknap was resumed to-day.

Thurman moved that the Senate sitting as a court, etc., take a recess of half an hour, that some time might be devoted to the consideration of legislative business.

Carpenter as counsel for the accused, said he understood the committee on appropriations have several matters to bring before the Senate; besides, he was thoroughly sick himself and not able to be there to-day. The witness (Evans) had not yet arrived, and he, therefore, asked the Senate as a court, to adjourn until to-morrow.

Conkling moved an amendment, that the court adjourn until 12 to-morrow, instead of taking a recess, rejected.

The motion of Thurman for a recess was rejected.

Caleb P. Marsh was recalled and answered a question of Manager McMahon. He said he remembered the Secretary being at his house in New York to dinner, but could not say when it was. On one occasion, Reid, Gen McDowell and Belknap were there together.

Cross examined by Carpenter—Q.—You stated yesterday that at the same time Mrs. Belknap and Mrs. Bowers were at your house? A.—Yes.

Question—Had you, prior to the time these ladies were at your house, made an application for or thought of procuring a tradership? Witness answered he was in Washington some time in August 1870 and thought that was the first time he saw Belknap. There was some talk of appointing a post trader. Did not remember if that was prior to the time the ladies were at his house.

Question—Was there any corrupt agreement between Belknap in regard to your being appointed post trader at Fort Sill?

The managers objected to "corrupt," and the objection was sustained.

Question—Was there any agreement for your paying Belknap any money in consideration that he would appoint you post trader at Fort Sill? Answer—There was not at any time.

Question—Was there an agreement between you and Belknap that you would pay him money or valuables in consideration of his continuing Evans as post trader at Fort Sill? Answer—Never. The witness further testified that there was no agreement between him and Belknap to the effect that Belknap should be paid for appointing Evans post trader at Fort Sill.

Marsh again replied there was not.

Carpenter asked if the great inducement in making the appointment was not owing to the kindness extended to Mrs. Belknap. Marsh replied, this had a great deal to do with his making the appointment.

In response to questions put by one of the Senators, he said the reason he gave half the money he received from Evans to Belknap was because he [illegible]. He sent the money as a present always gratuitously. He was not asked whether Belknap knew how these payments were to be before he received them, but Mr. Marsh was fully cognizant of their [illegible] for sending them. He had no conversation with any one on the subject of sending money to Belknap until the one he had with the present Mrs. Belknap on the night of the funeral of the first Mrs. Belknap. He was asked to give this conversation, but Manager McMahon objected on the ground that a conversation with a third party was not proper evidence. The objection was sustained.

A Senator asked whether he had ever assigned a reason to Belknap for sending this money, to which Marsh replied he had not. There had been no communication between him and Belknap in consequence of which he sent this money to Mrs. Belknap.

Logan asked if there had been any arrangement with any other person than Belknap whereby he sent money to Belknap, to which objection was made by the managers.

This objection gave rise to a lengthy discussion, Judge Blair arguing that it was necessary to show that there was an arrangement with some other party to whom the money was sent, although Belknap was the proper custodian. The objection was finally overruled and the question answered by witness. He said I had a conversation with the present Mrs Belknap on the night of the funeral. She asked me to go up stairs with her to look at the baby in the nursery. I said to her as near as I can remember, "This child will have money coming to it after awhile." She said, "My sister gave the child to me and told me that the money coming from you to her I must take and keep for it." I am not certain about the rest of the conversation. I have an indistinct impression about what was said, and said "all right; perhaps the father ought to be consulted" and her reply was that if I sent the money to him she would get it anyway without the child. Marsh continued that he had an indistinct recollection of a conversation with Belknap that night, but could not be certain about it.

McMahon asked when Marsh sent the remittance to Belknap, saying it was from "S. W.," if Belknap asked by letter or otherwise, where it was from.

Carpenter objected, and an argument between McMahon and Carpenter followed.

Senator Conkling said to save time he would call for the reading of a similar question by Senator Morton, and the answer thereto, from which it appears that Belknap made no such inquiry.

Senator Wright asked on what he based his assumption yesterday, when he said he presumed Belknap knew from whom the money sent him came. Ans: I presumed he knew because he had appointed Evans to this post at my request. I had no other business transactions with Gen. Belknap whatever, except sending this money. It was a kind of general knowledge, arising from our general relation.

Question by Logan—From a conversation with the present Mrs. Belknap, you speak of an understanding with the former Mrs Belknap, now deceased. Please state that understanding.

The question was objected to by both managers, and counsel for the defense Logan, insisted on an answer and a discussion ensued. The Senate decided that the question should be answered.

He did not think he had stated that he had an understanding with Mrs Belknap. The witness further testified that the first money sent to Mrs Belknap, deceased, was sent without any arrangement with any person. When he paid Gen Belknap in person he did not have any conversation with him whence the money came or in any way regarding it. For the first two or three years witness saw Belknap two or three times a year, but had no recollection of the money having been referred to in any conversation between them.

Henry S. Brinkerhoff, a clerk in the Adjutant General's office, War Department was sworn and identified a letter from Marsh asking application for the post tradership at Fort Sill as having been on file in the Adjutant General's office. He identified the answer as the one on file in the hand writing of Gen. Belknap.

Gen Hazen was questioned about a portion of his testimony of yesterday, and said, after consideration, he had become satisfied that his letter to Belknap read yesterday was not written before he (Hazen) was examined before the committee on military affairs of the House.

The witness was cross examined by Carpenter, and was shown a letter dated City of Mexico, March 17 1876, addressed to Hon. H. Clymer, chairman of the House committee on expenditures in the war department heretofore published. In this letter, General Hazen calls attention to the testimony given by him before the committee on military affairs in 1872, and speaks at length of the abuses in the post traderships. In reply to the questions of Carpenter, the witness testified that he had some interests in this impeachment; he had been somewhat active in setting things going.

Q.—Did you write that article in the N. Y. Tribune?
A.—I did not.

Q.—Who did? A.—I suppose Mr. Smalley did. I furnished the information out of which the letter was written.

BY ATLANTIC CABLE.

Turkish War News.

The Herald's cable news from the seat of war in the East this morning is somewhat more favorable to the Servians in the Northwest. They are before the Bosnian township of Novarosh. In the east the Turks have not followed up their victory at Saitchar, but have withdrawn over the river Timok in Turkish territory. Tchernayoff's position is now safe. Some Asiatic troops are at Nizza, which is a point of great strategic importance, the Turks having greatest advantage there on account of fortifications erected during the recent year, and defended by 100 heavy cannon. 40,000 Turkish troops are at Russa, full of enthusiasm or fanaticism.

A conflict between Austria and Russia is feared, notwithstanding the late pacific reassurances. Andrassy hates the Russians and Sclaves, therefore it is hoped the rumors of his dismissal will prove true.

A rigid censorship of the press prevails in Turkey.

Paris, July 11.—The Turks have captured Lacichar, and the Servian Gen Tchernayoff is hemmed between the Turkish armies marching from Widdin and Soppia. The position of Servian Gen. Antich near Naulbazar, is threatened.

Belgrade, July 11.—The Turks have retreated from the right bank of the river Drina to Widdin, and the Servian army occupies several villages in that region. The population of the district has risen and joined the Servians.

The Servians under Gen Brifau fought a superior force of Turks for seven hours on the 7th inst at Kruschevaz. The Turkish loss was considerable. The Servians, with slight loss, captured some flags, a quantity of arms and occupied several villages.

The Mahommedans of [illegible] are petitioning the Prince of Montenegro to protect their lives and property.

Turkey has acceded to Roumania's request for the neutralization of the Danube, on condition that Roumania must prevent the supply of arms through her territory to the Servians.

Egyptian troops were starting on the 10th for Turkey. It is rumored that 12,000 men are under arms and orders for the Turkish service.

A special to Estafette reports that Tchernayoff is retreating toward the Servian frontier. His army is demoralized, and there are rumors of his dismissal.

The Montenegrin army numbers 19,000 strong. It has occupied the road between Klek and Gatz and intends to surround Churz and Stabili. Its movements are kept secret as far as possible.

A correspondent of the Times, reviewing the Eastern situation, says it is the opinion of competent men that nothing decisive has occurred. All that is now transpiring must be considered as a mere series of attempts by the Servians to join the Montenegrins and effect a junction.

According to the latest reports, Dervish Pasha was preparing to attack the southern frontier. The Montenegrans held good defensive positions.

According to concurrent accounts from Widdin and Belgrade, Osman Pasha has withdrawn from before Saitbachar, having failed owing to the force of the enemy and his flank being threatened.

The Paris special says Mehmet Ali has been driven back.

A dispatch from Constantinople of July 10 says that a great battle was fought near Hirot. The result is not known.

Wreck of an American Ship in the Straits of Magellan.

London, July 11.—A dispatch from Valparaiso via Montevideo, June 5th, announces that the American steamship Georgia, which left New York May 14th for Panama and San Francisco, and which has been previously reported as having touched at Rio Janeiro, is ashore in the Straits of Magellan and will probably be a total wreck. The cargo is being saved.

Some of the farmers in Union county begin harvesting this week.

The crops of Baker county never appeared to better advantage than at this period. Should the yield come up to present appearances there will be many happy and grateful farmers in that county, in the fall of this Centennial year.

These mines are very rich, and will hereafter be made to yield double the amount of the last clean up, as a double force of men will be employed and the work continued night and day.

Geo. W. Richardson writes to the Astorian as follows: "I was informed last evening by Tom [illegible], that the body of a man was found lashed to a fish boat with the lead line, at a point [illegible] False Tillamook Head, between the long and short land beach in Tillamook county. The body was found on Monday last by an Indian of the name of Nell John, and can be got at only at extreme low tide. The flesh is mostly gone about the head and face. Yellow duck pants, red drawers, gray shirt and oil coat is in the boat. The boat is but little damaged. The coroner from Tillamook will get to where the body is on Saturday or Sunday. There was a net found on the south side of Tillamook bar last week, but the Indian who found it cut the rope and lead from the net and left the net on the beach. I found part of a boat on the long land beach last week marked Radoilet & Co., No. 6."

The Central Pacific Indorsement of the California Pacific Bonds Valid.

San Francisco, July 11.—The German bondholders of the California Pacific railroad, and the directors of the Central Pacific, to-day presented an agreed case to Judge Wheeler, of the 19th district, to obtain a decision relative to the validity of the indorsement by the Central Pacific of the bonds of the California Pacific for the purpose of taking an appeal to the supreme court, by the decision of which they mutually agree to abide. Judge Wheeler rendered a profound decision that the indorsement is valid, and the case will now be taken to the supreme court. The recent decision of Judge Morrison, of the 4th district court, in the Coolot & Robinson suit, to the effect that indorsement was illegal and void, has probably prompted the present measure.

Suicide.

Last evening, about 8 o'clock, Mrs. Hern, residing at 206 Minna street, entered the room of a lodger named Lawrence H. Lundius, and found him lying on the floor, face downward, in a pool of blood. A derringer was in his right hand. The shot had shattered the looking glass over the wash stand, and the water in the wash bowl was dyed with blood, showing that he had stood before the looking glass and shot himself through the right temple. The deceased was a jeweler, and in the employ of Linson Bros. He was a native of Sweden, and married.

An inquest was held to-day on the body of Lawrence H. Lundius, who blew his brains out last evening. A letter was found to his employers, Linson Bros., stating that he was guilty of a great crime, and a search of effects of deceased showed he had watches, jewelry, silver, &c., from the establishment to the amount of $30,000. The goods had not been missed by the firm until so discovered.

Revenue Agent Clark not Dismissed.

With reference to the recently reported dismissal of Special Revenue Agent Clark, which has caused considerable commotion in political circles here in connection with the late changes in the Treasury Department at Washington, it is now stated that private advices deny that he has yet been removed, and state further that Commissioner Pratt has directly refused to dismiss him, making a square issue between the Commissioner and the President. Clark, in the meantime, is conducting the business of his office as heretofore.

Whisky Suits in San Francisco.

In U. S. district court to-day some whisky cases came up. The proprietors of Bay View distillery were given twenty days to answer. The case of the Los Angeles distillery is set for August 8th, and that of Antioch distillery for August 10th.

Forger Arrested.

A young man, named D. W. Lorey, recently the publisher of a small paper called the Assessment Guide, was arrested to-day for forging the name of Lieut.-Gov. James A. Johnson to a letter, and using the same to obtain credit, in which he succeeded to the amount of upwards of a thousand dollars. He is reported to have used the same letter for a similar purpose in Virginia City.

News from Santa Clara.

Santa Clara, July 11.—The county assessor's report was filed to day. It shows the total value of property in the county to be nearly $7,000,000.

It is rumored that a large new hotel will be built soon.

To-day has been very hot; the thermometer stood at 90° in the shade at 2 o'clock.

Drowned.

Los Angeles, July 11.—Jacob Lunbar, 19 years old, was drowned in the San Gabriel river, near Compton. On Monday, with two other young men, he went into a deep hole to bathe, and after being in some time, he started to swim across the sheet of water. When in the middle he was seen to sink, and his companions being alarmed, started for help. Before it arrived, young Lunbar was drowned.

EGYPTIAN VILLAGES.

[From the London Times' Massowah Correspondence.]

The sheik of this particular village was well dressed, in Oriental fashion, had a house of many rooms, and even glass windows. He gave me sherbert and coffee, and then took me round his village. The mud huts are all built one against the other, like the cells of a beehive, save where they are divided by little lanes that run through the village. I chose a hut at random, and asked if I might go in. "Yes," said my companion, "but it is very poor, and there is nothing to see."

We went to the entrance, these huts having as a rule, no doors. An old woman—at least she looked old; but the women are old at forty—barred the way. I offered money, but that was not enough to overcome her feelings that her house was her castle, where no Christian should enter, and the sheik had to insist. One small room—mud walls, mud roof, mud floor—was all we found. Four bricks made a small fireplace, but there was no fire. A small basin of maize, five water jars, an earthen pot for artificial hatching of chickens, a cock and three hens, a small heap of sacking by way of bed clothes, constituted all the furniture of the house. Four yards by five was the extent of the house, and this was partly taken up by a raised dais of mud, which serves as the family bed in every fellah habitation. A family of four lived in this space. The head of the family was considered pretty well-to do by the fellah world, as he is the owner of five feddans (acres) of land.

I tried another house, taken similarly at random. It was still smaller and more pitiful than the last. The mud bed occupied half the space. Three yards by one was my measurement of the rest. A water jar and a reed pipe were all the signs of habitation. There were no boxes or cupboards in which other goods or chattels might be hidden. A family of three, laborers on the lands of others, lived here. I have seen pigs better housed in England.

The Salem Mercury of Monday evening says: "From a passenger on the afternoon train we learn of a shooting scrape which occurred at Eugene City last Saturday. It seems that two citizens of that place, Dr. A. L. Nicklin and St. John Skinner, had a falling out about a bill of some nature, when Skinner attacked Nicklin, who drew a derringer and shot Skinner in the breast, the ball striking the breast bone, inflicting a severe but not dangerous wound. Dr. Nicklin was arrested and his preliminary examination was still progressing when our informant left there to day."

DOUGLAS COUNTY CELEBRATIONS.

Roseburg, July 7, 1876.

To the Editor of the Oregonian:

Our Centennial Fourth was duly celebrated in the different portions of this county in a very honorable manner, and we all feel as if we had acquitted ourselves in an acceptable way. Many of the citizens of the different parts of the county availed themselves of the low rates of fare on the railroad and went to Portland to "see the elephant," and to attend to business. Among them may be mentioned Mr. W. H. Byars of the Plaindealer, and W. S. Moss of the Independent.

Of the different celebrations throughout the county, we are inclined to allow Looking Glass to wear the laurels, as it is generally conceded that the most interesting and large attendance was there. The grounds selected were in a grove near the mouth of Looking Glass creek, on the bank of the South Umpqua river, at a distance of about eight miles south of Roseburg. The selection of these grounds was surely wise, as it was the most central of any point that could be found, being nearly an equal distance from Roseburg, Ten Mile and Myrtle Creek. The crowd commenced to assemble on Monday morning, and before evening it was estimated there were upwards of one hundred on the ground, and the whisky shops and candy stands were numerous. In addition to these there were two large swings; all having for their prime object a desire to make money, and not to make the occasion pleasant. On Tuesday morning, the 4th, the wagons, hacks, buggies, horses, etc., came rolling into the grounds, and long ere the time for the exercise to commence, a large and restless concourse of people had assembled. At 10 o'clock the guns commenced to fire the given number of shots, and soon thereafter the drums beat the martial roll that was to call together the audience; and then, under the efficient guidance of the chief marshal, Mr. James M. Dillard, the people were formed into procession, and the grand march commenced. The procession was headed by the Ten Mile brass band, which discoursed sweet music, to which the vast throng kept time, and following were the different officers of the day—orator, reader, and the many loyal sons and daughters of our patriotic Umpqua hills. The termination of the march was at the stand, where the usual exercises of the day were conducted by Rev. Mr. Roberts, chaplain; Rev. S. C. Moore, president; Hon. H. C. Winston, reader; Rev. J. Howard, orator. After the exercises the audience repaired to the table, well filled with the nourishing force, prepared by skillful hands. The principal exercises being over, the vast concourse of people enjoyed themselves in various ways, some promenading, some swinging, others foot-racing and horse-racing; and at an early hour the "tripping of the light fantastic toe" commenced, which was kept up until the "wee sma' hours" of morning. Thus ended the first centennial celebration at Looking Glass.

The celebration at Cleveland was a very pleasant and enjoyable affair. The oration was delivered by Prof. B. A. Grubbe, of Wilbur. Prof. Grubbe is a young man, but his oration is considered by all present to be a very fine and scholarly effort, and does credit to him. Excellent music was furnished by a well trained choir, and a general picnic dinner was indulged in.

The celebration at Elkton was pleasant; the oration being delivered by Mr. Benedict; and a dance was given at night.

We may speak equally as highly of Myrtle Creek, at which place Prof. Hurd delivered the oration, doing honor to himself and the town.

The readers of the Oregonian must confess that the sons and daughters of the rugged hills of old Umpqua have met and properly celebrated the first Centennial day of our American Independence. May the prosperity that has overshadowed our beloved country for the past hundred years be continued; and may civilization continue to advance and one hundred years hence the unity and prosperity of the U. S. A. still be unbroken.

UMPQUAITE.

NEW YORK JOURNALISM

In a late number of the Springfield Republican appears an editorial analysis of the several leading newspapers of New York, from which we clip the following very just paragraph:

The leading morning sheets, the Tribune and the Times, the Herald and the Sun, are the great papers of the city, and likely to long continue so. The Times has got the lead as the representative Republican sheet, and perhaps never stood better than it does now. The Tribune, surviving the death of Horace Greeley, is now struggling under the ownership of Jay Gould, but will probably outlive that, too, and sooner or later, be itself again. It has the advantage of both the Times and Herald in having an editor who sees that there is correspondence and relation in its several parts; in other words, that there is a filling as well as a frame work in its daily issues. The Sun also has great advantages in its good editing. Without fully comprehending the full scope of its position and opportunity, its enterprise and force and vitality have pushed it to a most enviable place in New York journalism, and gives it the largest circulation of any real daily newspaper in America. The Herald is still the great bonanza of American journalism. Its generous advertising gives it an income at least twice that of any other paper, and enables it to support the largest and perhaps ablest staff of writers; but its power is very much wasted through lack of coherence, purpose and organization. If Mr. Bennett would quit fooling with life and attend to business, he would add to the leadership among the American press which his father achieved for the Herald, and make the Telegram its evening mate. But there is now a hopeless, disorderly waste in their wealth of resources and opportunities, that seems to be giving nobody satisfaction, except the proprietors of the Sun. The Bulletin is successfully disputing with the Journal of Commerce the place of the commercial daily, and surpasses it in the fullness and variety of its treatment of business questions.

New York must continue for another generation at least to furnish the ablest, most expensive, and most widely circulated newspapers of the country. Their figures given in our opening paragraph are both an illustration and assurance of this; but they have not grown so broadly and evenly in character as they have grown in circulation and resource, nor have they kept pace with the growth of journalism in other places. Misfortunes of ownership and subserviency to local material and political interests have proven a great hindrance to their just development. In real intellectual character, political influence and independence, they are not fulfilling the impetus or the prophecy that the elder Bennett and Greeley and Raymond gave. In these and some other respects, the press of Cincinnati and Chicago has done better, and made more rapid as well as healthy progress. But the laws of destiny, which are in the long run the laws of right, will bring them back to their true and noble paths. The journalism of the great American city cannot be long or far deflected from the right course. The laws of self interest are constant and unvarying, if not always recognized and accepted, and are surely carrying American journalism on to its best undertakings and its true mission.

There are flax fields amounting to over two hundred acres in the neighborhood near Marion station, principally owned by Parrish & Miller. This firm has extensive machinery for handling the flax with a view to saving the seed as well as the fibre. They are just finishing up the last year's crop of flax and have several tons of the fibre ready for shipment. R. Akin, Esq., is cultivating thirty acres of Russian flax. It stands alongside of several other varieties and is superior in point of growth of fibre, but less productive of seed.

ECCENTRICITIES OF AN AUTHORESS.

When once launched out into literature George Sand seemed to have forgotten her sex. For a young lady she was decidedly eccentric, and the success of her male nomme de plume made her assume masculine airs. She smoked cigarettes, drank absinthe, and dressed in male attire. This she pretended to be a matter of economy. Balzac said at that time that no lady could live and dress like a lady on less than 25,000 francs a year. George Sand discussed this question with her friends, arguing in favor of the cheapness of men's clothes in comparison with those of women, and in the end renounced her jupons. The first suit that she wore was styled the redingote guérite, of coarse gray cloth, with vest and pantaloons of the same. She wore a gray hat and a large woolen cravat, looking for all the world like a college student in his first term of the freshman year. "I cannot tell you," she wrote to a friend, "how much pleasure my first pair of boots gave me; I felt like sleeping in them. With those little iron shod heels I felt solid upon the sidewalk, and I flew about Paris with them from one end to the other."

The biographical details of George Sand's life, marriage and literary career, have been public property for many a year. For a long time she was decidedly fast, and nothing but genius could excuse her eccentricity. She frequented the studios of artists and went with them to the cafes. She had a son, Maurice Sand, who is now living, and was with his mother when she died. Maurice Sand idolized his mother, as Mlle. Dupin idolized hers. When she had "sown her wild oats," as we might say of a young man, George Sand became a model matron, a good mother, the best of neighbors, and a real Sister of Charity for the peasants of Berry; and of late years she has worn the garments of her sex, though she never got over the masculine habit of smoking.

On Monday of last week, at Pendleton, Pres. Nail met with a very severe accident. He was riding a wild horse, which threw him and he becoming entangled in a rope, was dragged several yards. He was bruised, lacerated and injured internally.

WEDNESDAY MORNING, JULY 1_, 187_

HOUSE AND SENATE

The position assumed by the national House of Representatives on the subject of the appropriation bills is a novel one, and if established as the rule of Congressional action would prove as dangerous as it is novel. As is generally known the Senate made certain important amendments to the appropriation bills passed by the House and the House refused to concur. This brought matters to a dead lock. The Senate would no more recede than the House would concur and the fiscal year expired without the bills being passed. The President just before the expiration of the year caused it to be understood that he intended not to violate the law by incurring expenses for which no appropriations had been made and that in order to avoid this he would order the civil service to cease on the first of July, closing all the offices of the revenue interior postoffice department &c till the appropriations should be made. In other words, the wheels of government were to stop at the end of the fiscal year for which means had been provided for carrying it on. Still both branches of Congress stood firm. A joint resolution was passed however just in time to prevent the government from closing business, by which the government is to be continued for the present on the basis of the old appropriations. This bridges over the chasm but does not settle the point of controversy.

The position of the House is, that since, by the constitution, appropriation bills must originate in that body, they alone have the constitutional right to say what shall and what shall not be in an appropriation bill, and that the Senate in amending these bills has transcended its legitimate powers and must therefore recede. Thus the House plants itself upon a question not of policy or economy, as it might reasonably do, but upon a question of absolute right. In support of this assumption, the leaders of the House institute comparisons between Congress and the British Parliament, claiming that there the matter of appropriating money is exclusively in the hands of the commons, the lords having nothing to do but acquiesce. The comparison is inapt and the reasoning thereon fallacious, even if the fact with regard to Parliament were as claimed by the House of Representatives, because the relations between the Senate the government and the people are not the same as those between the Lords the Crown and people. In some respects the Senate is analogous to the House of Lords, but in its most important relations it is entirely different. The Lords are, in every sense the representatives of the Crown. They come not from the people. They are not chosen by the people. The Commons are the only representatives the people have in Parliament. To them alone the people look for protection against the encroachments of royal prerogative. The Senate, though its members are chosen by a different method from those of the House, are not the representatives of the crown but of the people of the several States in their corporate capacity. It is scarcely a less popular branch of Congress, though certainly a less populous one than the House. This seems to be overlooked or ignored by those who seek to have this government controlled by English analogies.

But the truth is, that if the analogy were complete the claim of the majority in the House would not be maintainable. To assume that the lords are powerless over the subject of appropriation bills, and must acquiesce in whatever the commons propose, is to fly in the face of history. Before the time of Cromwell's revolution, the crown was accustomed to exercise—though it was asserted to have been a violation of Magna Charta—the power of raising money without the assent of the commons. That is the point on which the controversy mainly hinged, which ended in the overthrow of the government—the point for which Charles I lost his head. But upon the restoration, and from that time down, the lords have been accustomed to refuse concurrence in appropriation bills which contained matter not properly belonging to such legislation. Instances of this sort occurred during the reign of Charles II, and have been repeated several times since. And this is the sort of legislation which the House is now attempting to force through the Senate—tacking upon appropriation bills provisions for reduction of the army, and the like. By doing such provisions the House makes it appear unnecessary to have so large appropriations as would otherwise be necessary and then cuts down the appropriations to correspond with the other provision. It is an ingenious device and furnishes a specious argument in support of the claim that the whole matter belongs properly to the appropriation bill. But it would be just as correct to say that a bill abolishing all the courts of the United States and then striking out as unnecessary all appropriations for the administration of justice, was simply an appropriation bill. If the House by such means can reduce the army or civil list one half, and tie the hands of the Senate so as to prevent its coming to the rescue it can, with equal right abolish the army or the courts, or the treasury in toto and demand the acquiescence of the Senate as an absolute constitutional right. And wherefore require the concurrence of the Senate to give validity to the appropriation bills, if there is no discretion vested in that body to refuse its assent to a bill which virtually stops the wheels of government? If all power over a subject is vested exclusively in one branch of Congress why require the other branch to consider that subject at all. The bare statement of the position of the House is its refutation.

GOVERNOR HAYES' LETTER

It is generally understood that political platforms mean very little beyond what they mean as a device to catch votes, and this being understood destroys to a very great extent their force in that direction. As definitions of the position of the parties adopting them they signify nothing, because on all questions of importance the position of every political party is well known without any such declaration. Such is not the case however with the individual declarations of candidates. They are supposed to signify a purpose on the part of those making them to carry out the principles set forth and are accepted as personal pledges which cannot afterwards be disregarded without dishonor. The letter of Governor Hayes accepting the nomination of the Republican party for the Presidency will be received as a much more important paper than the platform of the Convention that nominated him. And it will add greatly to his strength among the people. His clear and distinct utterances on the subject of civil service reform are worth more than a volume of the generalities with which the Convention treated the subject. The sense of the whole country has condemned the system of official spoils for party services and Gov Hayes' explicit declaration that the whole vicious and corrupt system must be abolished and the ante Jackson practice of appointing and removing upon merit restored will be hailed as a pledge of more value than any other that could be given. It is the vital point in the demand which is echoing and re-echoing over the country for reform in the Administration. When elected President, Hayes will find it hard to resist the importunities of friends and the demands of party managers for the continuance of the system of plunder that has so long debauched the public service but he has the reputation of a man of different mould from Grant, and the people have reason to believe he will not turn his back upon them as the present Chief Magistrate has done. He has shown in this letter that he is in sympathy with the better class of all parties, and he may be trusted to be true to his past record as an honest faithful, patriotic servant of the Republic in whatsoever position he may be called to fill.

The Centennial celebration is over and the odds and ends are picked up. The programme for a week's festivities with variety sufficient to furnish entertainment to all classes, was admirably arranged and as admirably executed. On every hand we hear praise of the committee of the common council who had the matter in hand. They devoted themselves to the work assigned with an energy and assiduity that made failure impossible. Messrs Besser and Andrus gave their constant and efficient attention to the specialties to which they were designated; and Mr Sanborn proved himself the most ubiquitous individual and the most complete master of the situation as a whole and in all its details, that ever got hold of a celebration. We record a unanimous vote of thanks of the whole community to the committee. If we should all live to see the next Centennial we shall know whom to call upon to get up and manage the jubilee, which will last two weeks instead of one.

What a villainous fellow he must be who wrote this:

> Put away the little foghorn
> Through which Bjallen used to spout
> He will never on earth need it
> Sammy Tilden's laid him out
> Gone to meet the rag baby

The East Oregonian says on Wednesday evening of last week at Walla Walla in the saloon of Wm Masterson a difficulty occurred between a man by the name of Boyer and Peter Lynch. Boyer was getting the best of Lynch when Masterson stepped up and took the fight from the hands of Lynch. Masterson made some remark when Boyer wanted to know what he was going to do about it and at the same time slapped him in the face. Masterson immediately drew his knife and stabbed Boyer several times in the body. Our informant says it was supposed in Walla Walla that Masterson had left the country. On Tuesday night James Chancey (who has and yet does bear the reputation of being a gentleman under all circumstances) got into a difficulty with Lawrence Galbraith over a game of cards when the latter taking advantage of the quiet and genteel conduct of Chancey and thinking to get away with him struck him a terrific blow in the face with a slun shot. As soon as Chancey could recover from the staggering effects of the blow he drew his knife and plunged it several times into the body of his assailant with what was supposed at the time fatal effect. Chancey was arrested and placed under $500 bonds.

The amount of hose in the department is as follows White anchor 1 000 feet carbolized 3 750 feet, leather 2 400 feet total, 7 150 feet distributed as follows Engine Co No 1 300 feet White Anchor, 500 feet carbolized No 2 250 feet White Anchor 650 feet carbolized, No 3 250 feet White Anchor 700 feet carbolized No 4 200 feet White Anchor 850 feet carbolized No 5 150 feet carbolized, 750 feet leather, O S S Co's wharf 400 feet leather, Corporation shed 550 feet carbolized 1 250 feet leather The White Anchor hose is rated first class One hundred and fifty feet of the carbolized hose is in bad condition and worthless for fire purposes The balance is in apparent good order but has become so weakened by age and use that it is unsafe for steamer use more or less of it bursting at every fire

The new hose ordered by your honorable body will probably arrive during this month Then the annoyance and costly vexatious delay of bursting hose will cease In addition to the hose reported Engine Co No 1 is in possession of 500 feet of White Anchor hose the private property of Mr Jos Buchtel who has kindly loaned the use of it to the city until the arrival of the new hose ordered

The leather hose may be classified as follows Second class 1 150 feet third class 600 feet bad 300 feet worthless 300 feet

HYDRANTS

CISTERNS

I ... recommend that a cistern be constructed at the intersection of A and First streets

FIRES AND ALARMS OF FIRE

The record of fires alarms losses etc etc is from January 1st to July 1st 1876 My predecessor in office neglected to furnish me with his record of fires alarms losses etc occurring during the latter half of his term ... present an official record for that period of time To obviate all difficulty of this nature in the future I would recommend that the office of chief engineer be furnished a suitable book, in which to record all fires, alarms, losses insurance etc etc said book to be the property of the city

Your attention is respectfully called to the almost entire absence of scuttle-ways to roofs of buildings particularly to dwelling houses This is a serious drawback in case of fire and should be remedied Burning chimneys are of frequent occurrence and were proper scuttle ways provided so as to gain ready access to the roof and the space between the ceiling, joists and roof fires from this source in many cases would be prevented

I would recommend the passage of an ordinance providing under suitable penalties that all houses over one story in hight hereafter erected shall be provided with a scuttle hole of proper size in the roof and furnished with a ladder leading thereto

FIRE ALARM TELEGRAPH

This system of fire alarm has been in operation for the eleven months last past and has all things considered, performed its mission in a satisfactory manner

The cost of maintenance is trifling compared with the benefits of the system the quickness of the alarm and the known locality of the fire enabling the department to bring their services into requisition much earlier than they could under the old system

Since the introduction of the "trap lock" on station boxes false alarms have ceased thereby saving a considerable sum in repairs and wear and tear of apparatus—in fact saving a sum almost sufficient to pay the running expenses of the line

To render the system of more general benefit however and to extend protection to parts of the city not now covered by station boxes in my opinion it would be advisable to erect a box on the corner of Morrison and Fifth streets This station is central covers a large district and is much desired by the residents of that vicinity

The total cost of maintaining the line for the six months ending July 1 1876 was $436 01 as follows Salary of superintendent $150 repairs and supplies $286 01

Apparatus—One alarm bell 4 067 lbs weight, four engine house gongs ten station boxes striking machinery for bell battery of 73 cups about four miles of wire etc

POINT ADAMS.

The following is an extract from a letter written by Col John M Wilson of the U S engineer corps, to Lieut Col. B S Alexander, president of the board of engineers of the Pacific coast The letter is in relation to the encroachments of the sea upon the site of Fort Stevens at the mouth of the Columbia river concerning which so much has been said Col Wilson says

I have personally visited and inspected this locality (Point Adams) and from information obtained from Capt M P Miller 4th U S artillery commanding the post, who has for two years watched the erosion, and from my own examination I have to report as follows

The flood tide advancing through a channel narrow and shallow at low water but wide and swift at high ... coming from the west strikes the shore about three quarters of a mile south of the point and then changing direction sweeps northward along the shore until off the point it meets the flood in the middle channel this meeting of the tides forms breakers which roll up against the point of the reserve running east along the river shore and a little south of the west shore doing great execution while the flood tide of its own action through the first channel meantime is also washing away the shore

With the erosion of Point Adams Clatsop Spit due west appears to be moving in the same direction I have been informed that at lowest low water one could walk from the westerly beach to the spit I saw that this channel was quite narrow at low water and am inclined to think that only the action of the flood tide keeps it open Had I known this before I ordered the survey I should have included this channel and the spit and I have carefully observed the currents

Point Adams is a small spit consisting of ridges of sandy soil and swamps I carefully examined the shore where the erosion was in progress and found no clay At high water immense trees act as battering rams and aid the occasion destruction The beach is covered with drift wood near high water mark which one would think would constitute a good revetment in itself Numbers of these immense logs are found near the northern extremity of the point indicating something of an eddy when the tides meet

The swamps back of the shore line are filled with water during the rainy season emptying over the beach upon the west side and facilitating the erosion During the summer these are nearly all dry The greater part of the damage I am informed, occurs in the fall and winter but little going on during the summer months

It is with some hesitation that I present an opinion to the board as to the best method of stopping this erosion as I am not yet entirely familiar with the action of the tides and currents on this coast

It would appear that a change of direction of the current coming through the channel between Clatsop Spit and the main shore by a pier running out toward the spit, across that portion which is reported as a shoal at low tide might prevent the flood tide running up this direction and thus stop the eddy formed by the meeting of the tides through the two channels off the north of the point But it is to be feared that while success might attend this as far as the shore is concerned, the change might cause the erosion of the south face of Clatsop Spit and throw the materials thus washed off into the narrow channel over the bar

Again it is possible that a series of short pile piers, running out at right angles to the shore might break the force of the sea and by causing the sand to be deposited between them ... finally ... the point to the area it covered a few years since

To drive a continuous line of piles around the whole shore and cap them would be an expensive piece of work but would probably produce the desired result

There is a perceptible increase in the activity in business circles to-day over yesterday and with the advance of the week a still greater degree of animation may be anticipated The Centennial week was not generally used as a time for making collections in local monetary circles and a good deal of the business which is usually transacted during the first two or three days of the month was postponed until this week Collectors report an average promptness in payments in the city while there is some complaint on account of the slowness with which remittances from the interior are coming to hand. This is accounted for from the fact that in everything almost the long continued rains during the spring months put everything back The crops that were not marketed last fall were in many cases held back until June and this put the producers behind hand so that they could not pay the retail merchant and hence he is slow in settling with the importer or wholesale dealer The recent high water has also had its influence in retarding business transactions between the city and country and we apprehend that much less cause of complaint on this score will be found to exist after the lapse of a few days more

The past few weeks have made but little difference in the status of the silver question other than to depreciate the metal still a little further The banks here discount all payments in silver over the legal limit at 4 per cent which is a small discount compared with the rate elsewhere For instance, on the 7th London telegrams quoted fine silver at 48d per standard ounce a decline of 2d since the 1st instant and the lowest quotation in at least fifty years A year ago the price in London was 55¾d, and the market has been tending downwards during the interval. The question is becoming a very serious one to the people of this coast who are so largely interested, directly and indirectly in the silver mines Bars of silver have been sold in San Francisco recently at as low as 29½ per cent discount About 23 per cent is now lost if we include freight in getting silver converted into gold, so that a month's product of $100 000 in silver [illegible] $73 000 in gold out of which to meet regular expenses and pay dividends. The present London quotation is equivalent to $1 03 per ounce for silver, in New York At this rate two half dollars are worth 74.22 in gold No wonder the government is anxious to take up its paper in silver as [illegible] worth about 49c in gold

The Wheat Market.

In our local market there are occasional transactions but in most cases they are by parties on one side who are under a necessity to sell as nearly all who now hold the cereal have been holding for higher rates and the lower [illegible] now prevailing does not call it out. Oregon wheat ex warehouse is quoted in Liverpool at 10s 4d@10s 5d per cental with a dull market. San Francisco has a little firmer tone but there is no improvement in average [illegible]. The crop of California estimated at 750 000 tons is now being moved. There are some forty vessels at San Francisco [illegible] to load [illegible] and a few have already finished. There were 23 cargoes en route for English ports from [illegible] on the 1st of July, and 23 cargoes from [illegible]. The arrivals from California in June were 17 with an aggregate of 319,300 centals of wheat, and 11,000 barrels flour The arrivals from Oregon during the same month were as follows,

Name.	Centals.	Name	Centals
Aglaia	25,800	Dovenby	10 400
Bowden	63 700	Poonah	35 000
[illegible] Statesman	36,600	Renfrewshire	30,300
[illegible]brook Castle.	41,800	Valparaiso	23,800
Dauntless	30,900	Blanche	17 563
Total			313,263

In addition the Dovenby had 8 000 bbls flour Reducing the flour to wheat, the arrivals at England from the Pacific coast in June were 1,273 063 [illegible]

[illegible] heavy receipts, together with the prospect of a fine yield expected in England and no [illegible] discouraging reports from the other wheat growing countries of Europe have probably [illegible] the reasons for the downward tendency in [illegible]. We learn of one or two parties who have bought largely in Oregon during two or three seasons past who have not yet determined to enter this market at all the coming harvest year Others may however, take their places and no doubt buyers will be plenty if prices justify an active trade. At this time but few vessels are under engagement to load and important changes may occur before the next crop is on the market in material volume which will be a full month hence A sale of 5 000 bushels old at $1 45 per cental, during the week, is reported

BAY VIEW HOUSE,
BAKER'S BAY, UNITY, W. T.

MR DEXTER INFORMS THE PUBLIC that his House is now open for the reception of guests Its advantages in every respect over any other Summer Resort are too well known to Oregonians to repeat here. To strangers I will say that the place is in plain sight and across the Bay from Astoria on the sheltered side of Cape Hancock and very near and adjacent to the Fort and Lighthouse on Baker's Bay a beautiful sheet of water unequaled for Sailing Rowing Fishing and Bathing. The dark forest with its picturesque drives its mountain springs profusion of wild berries wild flowers and ferns, the horse itself to the Cape for Equestrians or walkers is one of the most delightful panoramas to the eye ever witnessed. The cosy beaches its caves luxuriantly wooded Island, its views of Astoria Chinook Fort Stevens, moist old Tillamook in the blue distance

The courteous hospitality of the officers of the Garrison at the Fort, and also of Mr Munson and family of the Lighthouse, make that place well worthy of a visit

The Salt Water Bathing in the bay within a few feet of the hotel, exceeds anything far or near for warmth of the water and mildness of its waves far preferable to the heavy surf and cold winds for women children and invalids while the sturdy swimmer or those who love the foaming surf in a few minutes walk will find a beach unsurpassed in beauty hard and level for the continuous drive of thirty miles At this end are huge rocks stretching out into the ocean from which fishers take from the sea Bass Rockfish Tom Cod Forgies etc etc. Crabs Clams Oysters &c in abundance (and the Table will never lack a sufficiency of those desirable adjuncts) Boats upon the Bay Saddle Ponies for the children Teams to the Weather Beach Croquet Swings Quoits etc FREE to Guests

Prices reduced from the old tariff

To those who would like to camp out wood and water and use of ground free Groceries provisions milk eggs, butter etc for sale at a small profit Campers can board at the Hotel if they prefer at fair rates A large Livery Stable two new and fine Ten Pin Alleys attached to the place

Stage Office to Oysterville Postoffice Wells, Fargo & Co's office also there No raw winds or damp fogs and more beautiful tracks and shady groves cannot be found The only regret the Landlord has is that his house is not larger but his grounds are large enough and beautiful enough to warrant next season a Hotel worthy of the surroundings.
